"Anyone starting this book under the impression that he may sleepily relax is in for a shock...continually provokes both pity and terror." --The Observer (UK)

The five other chilling stories in this collection echo a sense of dislocation and mock man's dominance over the natural world. The mountain paradise of 'Monte Verità' promises immortality, but at a terrible price; a neglected wife haunts her husband in the form of an apple tree; a professional photographer steps out from behind the camera and into his subject's life; a date with a cinema usherette leads to a walk in the cemetery; and a jealous father finds a remedy when there's a crowd . . .

Superior in many ways to the Hitchcock version.

By P. Burdette

"The Birds" is a riveting story, and I couldn't stop reading until it was done! It so outshined the other stories in the book that it became the only one in it I enjoyed. How I wished it was longer, a novel, more complete! But then -- it really was complete in itself, complete in its suspense, cloying, impossible not to think about for days later. I never looked at crows or gulls the same again after reading the story! Superior in many ways to the Hitchcock version.
